Lesson Overview—Questions

Objective: Identify ways that schools can promote nutrition education and participation in school meals by getting parents more involved in the school nutrition program.

Why it is important: It is important for parents or guardians to be involved in the school nutrition program because children need to continue eating healthy meals when they leave school. Getting parents interested in making healthy food choices can encourage students to eat healthy as well.

Instruction:
Ask the staff to answer the questions included in this training. Facilitate the activity.

Questions for the staff:

- What can teachers and the school administration do to get parents involved in the school nutrition program?
  Answer: The school administration can send out electronic newsletters that inform parents about what their children have learned about nutrition that week. The newsletter can also include easy, quick, and healthy recipes that parents can prepare at home. The school can hold monthly parent teacher meetings regarding updates on the school nutrition program. The school can also designate one day a week to invite parents to join their children at lunch.

- What are the benefits to getting parents involved in the school nutrition program?
  Answer: Children are influenced by their parents, so if their parents are making healthy food choices then children can be influenced to make those same choices. It is important that students continue a nutritious lifestyle when they leave school and go home. This not only benefits the children, but it benefits the parents as well.

- What can school nutrition staff do to promote parent involvement?
  Answer: Staff can post the weekly menu on the school website and send the attachment in an email as well. Staff can also hand out menus in the classrooms to the students so to give to their parents as well. This could help get the parents and the children to communicate about school meals.
Activity instructions:
- Ask staff to complete the Suggestion Activity using the above information. At the conclusion of the activity, review the Suggestion Activity Answer Key.
