During the early years, young children need many opportunities to try vegetables. They need time and opportunities to develop a taste for new foods. Some children may need at least 15 times before they are willing to try any new food. Therefore, incorporating fun and creative ways to introduce new foods is a sure way to help them try or like many vegetables. Here are five ways to introduce children to a variety of vegetables.

5 WAYS TO INTRODUCE CHILDREN TO VEGETABLES

1. Model healthy eating habits for children by eating a variety of vegetables with them.

2. Plan activities that allow children to learn more about vegetables, such as featuring a new vegetable each week.

3. Each month, invite a local farmer to talk about in-season vegetables with the children.

4. Serve vegetables to add splashes of color to the plate.

5. Prepare child-friendly recipes with the children that features new vegetables.

---

This project has been funded at least in part with Federal funds from the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Food and Nutrition Service through an agreement with the Institute of Child Nutrition at the University of Mississippi. The contents of this publication do not necessarily reflect the views or policies of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, nor does mention of trade names, commercial products, or organizations imply endorsement by the U.S. government.

The University of Mississippi is an EEO/AA/Title VI/Title IX/Section 504/ADA/ADEA Employer. In accordance with Federal law and U.S. Department of Agriculture policy, this institution is prohibited from discriminating on the basis of race, color, national origin, sex, age, or disability. To file a complaint of discrimination, write USDA, Director, Office of Civil Rights, Room 326-W, Whitten Building, 1400 Independence Avenue, SW, Washington, DC 20250-9410, or call (202) 720-5964 (voice and TDD). USDA is an equal opportunity provider and employer.