Get Moving In Your Meetings

Ground Rules to Get Moving
When it is time to get people moving during your class or meeting, consider the background of your group, focus on fun and safety, and let everyone know that:

- Participation is completely voluntary; no one is required to do anything.
- Movement is at each person’s own pace, in a way that is comfortable and without pain.
- Activities will be gentle, will last for only 5-10 minutes, and will not cause sweating.
- The goal is to get hearts pumping, mouths smiling, and energy levels rising.

Sit and Be Active
It is possible to get the benefits of activity without ever leaving a chair. Here are some sample ways to have fun when space is limited.

- Aerobic activity: Sit tall, raise arms and clap, while feet march to a musical beat. Play a lively game of seated Simon Says.
- Strengthening activity: Do some seated crunches: sit tall, tighten abs, release, and repeat. Resistance bands are great in chairs.
- Stretching activity: Raise arms overhead, spread fingers, hold. Push arms toward walls. Gently circle neck in both directions.
- Balance activity: Sit tall. Bring both feet off the floor, hold. Lift one foot at a time, point and flex toes, hold leg outstretched.
- Fun activity: To get everyone laughing, have a seated swim-a-thon with the crawl, breaststroke, backstroke, and butterfly.

Energizers for Icebreakers and Breaks
Energizers often work best when they are a little silly or based on childhood memories, so no one feels shy about moving in front of others. Here are some tips.

- Start with music. It’s always the best way to get folks out of their chairs.
- Try a simple round of the Hokey Pokey, Simon Says, or the Wheels on the Bus.
- Have everyone stand in a circle and wiggle like an inchworm, walk like an elephant, or balance a (pretend) ball like a seal.

• Ask everyone to stay in one place and ski, shuffle, swagger, sashay, skip, slither, skate, or ________ together.

• Play invisible beach volleyball. Form real teams of 4 people, pass out invisible balls, and ask everyone to keep their ball in the air.

Walking Around

Brisk walking can be an effective way to get fit and stay fit. Depending on the location and length of your training, there are many ways to add walking.

• Walking indoors: If the weather is bad, check out the indoor options – like stairs, hallways, or indoor tracks at colleges.

• Walking outdoors: Check with the facility where the training is taking place for local walking trails and other safe routes. Provide a walking map to participants.

• Group walking options: Consider ways to incorporate walking into the flow of a day. Can the group walk to a restaurant or walk around the building before a meal? Self-guided walking tours can also be an option in scenic or historic locations.
